

Abstract

A steering column switch comprises at least one switch lever having an actuating element, with the inner side thereof having a gate which is adjacent to a support and with at least one associated microswitch. An end of a tappet, which is guided in the support is in contact with the gate and the other end thereof is in contact with the microswitch.